REICHSTAG TALKS BRITISH ENTENTE

Could Agree if British Would Moderate Right to Saize Enemy's Ships.

LONDON, May 20 .- in a debate on foreign policy in the Reichstag the references chiefly concerned England.

Members of the Conservative and Centre parties said that if England withdrew her claim to the seigure of vessels at sea there would be no reason for an increase of the German navy.

Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, the foreign secretary, declared it was errone-ous to think that Germany was opposed to the abolition of the right of seizure. The English were always upheld to them as an example, but the rigorous-ly insisted on demands which did not fit their policy.

The Socialists declared that an Anglo-

German understanding depended on Germany alone as England had repeatedly pronounced in favor of an entente.

The "Scene,"

BERLIN, May 18 .- The Kaiser, on the occasion of a visit to Strassburg, expressed to the Burgomaster in a private conversation his great regret that occasionally anti-German outbursts are still heard in Alsace-Lorraine. In the light of this phenomenon, one could he was first arrested. made an autonomous constitutional federated State, but that it had been amalgamated with Prussia.

This conversation, which had been made public as the result of an indiscretion on the part of a third person, was made the basis of a violent attack on the Kaiser by the Socialist Deputy Scheidemann, who exaggerated the incident in a very unreasonable and un-politic manner. He criticized the Kaiser's remarks, saying that the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine by Prussia would be similar to a sentence of penal servitude.

The representatives of the govern ment left the chamber after this attack, which was, however, not checked by the President until after some violent dis-cussion. The chancellor, returning to the chamber after a two-hours' absence, amid the enthusiastic applause of all civil parties, refuted the unreasonable desire to see German national interests in the Reichslande guarded, and that he had only given expression to the indignation, which was universal in Germany, at the anti-German agitation still carried in Alsace-Lorraine.

He further said that all civil parties, even those in Alsace Lorraine, were at one in condemning the anti-German agitation carried on by certain circles. In conclusion, he remarked that the en-tire speech of the deputy was, in view of the facts, as unreasonable as it was unpolitic and ill-judged.

The enthusiasm with which the speech of the chancellor was applauded by all parties afforded proof that they all agreed in condemning not only the indiscreet action of the Socialist deputy, but also the often repeated at tempts to stir up ill-feeling in Alsace Lorraine against Germany.

Condemns Socialist.

BERLIN, May 19 .- The whole of the German press condemns the speech of the Socialist Deputy Scheidemann in the Reichstag and the unreasonable at tacks against the leading Federated State of Prussia. The journals also greatly praise the speech of the chan-cellor, in which he refuted the attack in a very able manner. The Socialist deputy is stated to have injured the prospects of his party.

AVIATOR, NOW FATHER, REMEMBERED IN CITY

Clarence H. Walker, the Coast avia for, became the proud papa of a boy at San Mateo, California, May 28. Walker will be remembered here in connection with his visit to Honolulu last year with Masson, the French aviator. They made several successful flights both at Leilehua and from Leilehua to Kapiolani Park.

At Hile, June 10, 1911, Walker had quite an accident in which his Curtiss biplane was wrecked. He rose several hundred feet in the air, starting from Hoolulu Park, made a wide detour around by Reed's Bay and, on his return to Hoolulu Park, as he tried gain a higher elevation, his machine caught in a lauhala tree. He escaped with only slight injuries but the biplane suffered considerably,

BALLENTYNE PLANS STREET SPRINKLING FOR ALL HONOLULU

it will be possible for the rapid transit — Proposal No. 7 (for wharf with nor'-west mile substructure, wood aggressive. from end to end, giving more water than at present, and do the work at a Hughes, $78,963.

Proposal No. 8 (for wharf with nor'very large saving over the present cost of watering only part of the same main an increased service at less cost," is gineering the way the rapid transit manager puts $84,263. Builders of rapid transit rolling stock are now turning out streets sprinkling tanks to be run over rapid transit lines. These tanks carry loads of four hundred barrels and the water is shot from the sprinklers under air pressure, making it possible for the car operators to shoot the water from curb to curb of the widest street. The idea here, if the scheme is adopted, will be to operate two such tank cars, to run from end to end of all the existing car lines, keeping the streets well sprin-kled. Stand pipes will have to be put in at various points along the line except in the center of the city, where the water supply could be obtained at the rapid transit engine house. The superintendent of public works has agreed to instal six-inch stand pipes soon as they may be called for, such pipes being necessary for the quick filling of the tanks.

"With two tanks and four men we could do more than is now being done with eight sprinklers, sixteen mules and the ten or twelve men on the job, sides increasing the service to extend to our own entire right-of-way," says Mr. Ballentyne. "I have suggested this to the supervisors and they appear to be favorable to the plan. I have written to the mainland for complete figures of cost and will be able to give the supervisors definite figures very shortly. It would not take long to get the tank cars here if the city wants to make a contract with us at a figure that will washed down. The cores of the spray would wash every bit of dust into the gutters, while we could give water enough to carry it off into the sewers."
